Pine Tree League Will Function

The Pine Tree Baseball League promises to bloom again for the eighth season. The problem of rustling up money for a good start is causing more than one team a little worry. Once in action the affair will be self supporting and care for itself.

At the postponed annual meeting at Lewiston, Saturday night, Clifford Gove was reelected president and Robert B. Parr of Norway re-elected secretary-treasurer. The berth of vice president was not filled as the directors were not able to agree on a successor for Harry Delano of Oxford, who is a player. A non-participant has been suggested for that office and one from a neutral town preferred.

The meeting opened with a minute of silent tribute to Ernest C. Murch of Norway, a director last year, who died suddenly the last of March.

Numerous matters were discussed and some important questions will be settled at another meeting. The directors appeared to be in favor of abolishing the thirty percent gate to visiting teams and return to a flat guarantee. There was some opposition and that will be settled later.

Auburn offered a suggestion to draw players from Lewiston and Mechanic Falls was anxious to call on New Gloucester for three or four players, possibly with a merger. Auburn was granted the right to change the team name to Lewiston-Auburn.

A representative from Brunswick asked admission to the league should there be opportunity. New Gloucester was represented, but made no formal application for a spot in the line up.

Doc Doughty of Oxford reported his team would use only home town players. Elmer Aldrich reported that Norway-Paris expect to have a team of local players as last season and will strive to keep out of the cellar. Good playing material is in sight.

Livermore Falls, Milton and Rumford appear at this stage to be the three strongest towns in the bunch and seem reasonably sure of strong financial backing.

President Gove announced a meeting will be held in about a month, probably at Norway.

The North side of Main street has challenged the South side to a game of base ball. Of course neither side is organized but a canvess is being made for players and a rough and ready battle is expected to materialize. Harold "Fat" Anderson and Lester V. Ashton have been suggested as umpires. One rule will be made inflexible, that ringers will not be used.

Musical Treat Presented

A very enjoyable affair of the week was the public supper and entertainment at the Universalist church, Wednesday evening. The ladies of the Circle, with Mrs. Alice McIntire as chairman, served a most delicious supper. The program following was arranged by Mrs. Pearl Cook Kilborn and was a musical treat.

The opening number was by the grade orchestra, under the direction of Miss Josephine Rand. There were seven members, six violins and the drum, this being played by Etta Mae Judkins. The violins were Alice Hemingway, Chester Jack, Kenneth Calef, Robert Glines, Richard Saleby, Erlan Tyler. The selections were "Admore", and "Zoo". The little people were all in white with red capes, white lined and white caps. They were marshaled from the rear of the hall to the stage by little Miss Janet Thompson, who also directed with her baton in a very masterly manner, that won her audience. Miss Rand gave two cello solos, "In a Monastary Garden" by Kattelby, and "A Love Song" by Codman; Mrs. Anderson followed by "Just Keep A Smiling" to the accompaniament of the piano and cello, and for her encore, "Foolish Questions".

Mrs. Kilborn followed with marimba solos, "Schoen Rosmarin", by Fritz Kriesler, and "Polly" by Zamernik, and for an encore, "The Rosary" by Nevin. By special request, Mrs. Anderson gave another pianologue, "An Exhibition of Spring Millinery". She exhibited eight different styles of hats that fitted the talk she gave, but all of unknown time. Partridge Not for Re-Election

Rep. Donald B. Partridge of Maine has announced in a formal statement that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

Partridge now represents the Second Maine District, but by the re-districting law has been thrown into the First Districe represented by Rep. Beedy (R).

"For months I have been receiving requests and offers of support from all sections of the new First Congressional District urging me to be a candidate for Representative to Congress upon the Republican ticket in the coming primary election," said the statement.

"I deeply appreciate the confidence expressed in me and the support which has been tendered, and, in fairness to these loyal fritnds and in order that there may be no misunderstanding, I feel the time has now arrived when I should make my position absolutely clear.

"This country is passing through one of the most troublesome times in our history. The voters of the present Second District have honored me in selecting me to represent them in this 72nd Congress. The task demands all my energy and thought. I cannot at this time efficiently represent my district, do my duty to my country and at the same time carry on a political campaign. I propose to remain on my present job and complete it to the best of my ability, regardless of any political future and therefore decline to be a candidate.

"Again to my many friends who have offered their support, aid and assistance, I wish to express my sincere thanks and keen appreciations."

COMPANY C, 103RD INF. NOTES

The annual Federal inspection of Company C, 103rd Inf., was held at the armory, Friday evening, April 8th, at 8 o'clock, being inspected by Major H. P. Perrine, Jr., Infantry Instructor of the Mass. The company has a strength of sixty-one men and there were present fifty-seven men and the three officers. The drills were satisfactory and the members had cleaned and pressed the equipment until it made a very pleasing show, as the boys have only one and one-half hours training per week. A record crowd of spectators were present, showing their interest in the members of a military company which we all can feel proud of. The next regular drill will be held April 19th.

The range will be a busy place this coming season as the members must qualify a course with the 22 cal. rifle, owing to a shortage of ammunition allowance on the 30 cal. rifle. Only members who have never qualified will be authorized to fire the 30 cal. rifle, automatic rifle and pistol courses.

HARRY RUST VIRGIN

Died last Monday morning in a hospital in Portland at the age of seventy-seven years, after a few days illness. Mr. Virgin was a prominent lawyer in Portland.

He was born at Norway, Aug. 25, 1854, the son of William Wirt and Sarah Hall (Cole) Virgin. His father was a justice of the Maine Supreme Court. Mr. Virgin was graduated from Westbrook Seminary in 1875, and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Tufts College in 1879. He studied law in the offices of Butler and Libby and of Charles F. Libby in Portland and was admitted to the Cumberland Bar and to practice in the U. S. Circuit and District Courts in 1882. He was admitted to the U. S. Supreme Court in 1888.

Mr. Virgin married Miss Emma T. Harwood of Bowdoinham, Feb. 23, 1900. Mrs. Virgin survives him.

Mr. Virgin took an active interest in Republican politics. He was a member of the Maine House of Representatives in 1899 and in 1901 was elected to the Senate. He was returned the following session and served as president. Mr. Virgin was prominent in the order of Masons and was made a 33rd Degree Mason at Boston, Sept. 19, 1916.

In 1924 he built a summer home at Fryeburg, where he had spent part of each year since that time.

Funeral services were held at Masonic Temple in Portland, Wednesday. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

The Daughters of Veterans met Friday night in regular session. Report was made of "Veterans' Day", which was observed, not in the usual way, as none of the old Comrades were able to get out at this time, so a committee visited each one and carried flowers. Mrs. Betty Jacobs was installed as first council member, the first time she has been able to attend the meeting this year, and she received a warm welcome. Mrs. Hester Walker won the mystery box. Under the good of the order, readings were given on G. A. R. Day, April 6, Appomattox Day and Patriots Day. At the next meeting Grant's Birthday will be observed, which comes April 27.

After the business meeting, the bean bag contest was concluded, with the side captained by Miss Rita Frost, winning. Mrs. Mearle Brown and her losing side will do something at the next meeting in the way of entertainment.

FRANK N. JANKINS

Word was received in Norway, Tuesday of the death of Frank N. Jankins, in Alburquerque, N. M., formerly of Springfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Jankins will be remembered as summer visitors in Norway, where they made many friends. He was a talented musician, but ill health forced him to give up orchestra and concert work four years ago. They went to New Mexico last November, hoping he would regain his health.

Besides his widow, who was Miss Jeanette McKay, he leaves his mother and father, two brothers and one sister in Springfield. He was thirty-four years old. A sister of Mrs. Jankins, Mrs. Perley Merrill of Norway, and a brother, Fred McKay, of Skowhegan, left Wednesday for Springfield, where services will be held Saturday afternoon.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBRANCES

"Sixty-seven years ago Wednesday I left San Francisco for Colebrook, N. H. I was eleven years old and was going alone. It was on my birthday and it was Thursday, too." Thus spoke W. C. Leavitt.

"Consequently I'm seventy-eight today, hale, hearty, able, good looking, etc.,—you say the rest."

We refrain from comments as we wish to retain his good will and friendship a little longer.

I'd Rather Read Poetry

BY HENRY DAVIS NADIG

ON DOROTHY PARKER

Every love's the love before
In a duller dress.
That's the measure of my lore—
Here's to my bitterness:
Would I knew a little more,
Or very much less!

Thus Dorothy Parker concludes her new book of poems, "Death and Taxes", after reading which we felt that we know neither a "little more" nor "very much less". The volume contains forty-seven poems of which there is none that we can go into raptures about. It seems that Dorothy Parker has tried to emulate Edna St. Vincent Millay in her light and bitter tone. That she has done it unsuccessfully is obvious from the lack of freshness and originality that is so very charasteristic of Miss Millay's work. Yet a number of Miss Parker's poems have that Millayan tone of definance as well as the thought of death. Here is one poem that reminds us of the lighter tone of Miss Millay:

The Fisherwoman

The man she had was kind and clean
And well enough for every day,
But, oh, dear friends, you should have seen
The one that got away!

Sanctuary

My land is bare of chattering folk;
The clouds are low along the ridges,
And sweet's the air with curly smoke
From all my burning bridges.

Dorothy Parker's poems are not, we think, the type of poetry that is written for all times and for all ages. They have not a universal appeal. Yet in one sense they express much of the unsettled and rebellious feeling of youth today. Another poem of the new book is in the same vein:

Ultimatum

I'm wearied of wearying love, my friend,
Of worry and strain and doubt;
Before we begin, let us view the end,
And maybe I'll do without.
There's never the pang that was worth the tear,
And toss in the night I won't—
So either you do or you don't, my dear,
Either you do or you don't!
The table is ready, so lay your cards
And if they should augur pain,
I'll tender you ever my kind regards
And run for the fastest train,
I haven't the will to be spent and sad;
My heart's to be gay and true—
Then either you don't or you do,
Either you do or you don't!

So, despite the great hailing and acclaiming of this latest book of Dorothy line with those who praise her unceasingly. Yet neither do we scorn her work entirely, for there are in this book several poems that are excellent. It is just that we cannot seem to place this poet in the same category with Frances Frost and a number of our other beautiful singers. —Henry Davis Nadig.

THE LADY IN THE MOON

There is a brooding silence in her eyes
As of rich memories.
In the full sensuous curve of her ripe lips
Lingers the warmth of kisses past.
Her up-flung chin deepens the round
Of throat and shoulder, till it shapes a nest
Where lover's head may lie in happy rest.
She has loved much and oft, this Lady in the Moon.
And now she sits aloft
These Summer nights, and dreams, while sighs of love
From many lands float up in sacrifice to her.
Her thanks she sends in dewy radiance that bathes
All things in beauty, till the great round earth
Seems but the vision of a lover's dream.
She gives to love its perfect hour of bliss
When all the world hangs breathless in a kiss.
—Grace Isabel Colbron.

A PRESTIDIGITATING RHYMER

Ogden Nash rolls along with four wheels and no brakes in his newest and Soglawian-upholstered vehicle, all done up in the modern manner with body by Simon and Schuster. Here is the latest product of the incomparable Nash genius which is a peculiar and very entertaining phenomenon of the age—a manifestation which baffles critics and classifiers who attempt to place this strange and clever poet in any definite category. Ogden Nash himself is a "Three-l llama". He at once abashes and makes one laugh. His juggling of words and letters is a source of delightful bewilderment and fun for the reader—but not so confusing that one needs to hesitate in swallowing the whole book in one gulp. One never knows what will be ground out next from this Nashing process. Hence an insatiable avidity seizes the reader from the very first opening of the book—an eagerness which is still strong at the turn of the final page.

Ogden Nash's verse cannot be entirely cast aside as mere doggerel; it is an inherent part and expression of American life. His light satire is funnier than that of Samuel Hoffenstein and his verses are more clever and irresponsible while his wit is keen and his pen all-observing.

One of the choice specimens of Nashery in "Free Wheeling" is this:

THE LAMA

The one-l lama,
He's a priest.
The two-l llama;
He's a beast.
And I will bet
A silk payama
There isn't any
Three-l llama.

Another observation concerns

The Cow

The cow is of the bovine ilk;
One end is moo, the other milk;
And but for Bossy, Walker-Gordon
Would long ago have crossed the Jordan.

Amusing are the two poems called "The Anti-Saloon Leaguer" and "The Anti-Prohibitionist". See for yourself! How cleverly stated is his quatrian (appropriately) called

PAJAMAS, HUH?
OR, DRESSES WERE SO NICE

Sure, deck your limbs in floppy pants;
Yours are the limbs, my sweeting.
You look divine as you advance—
Have you seen yourself retreating?

In longer poems Nash philophizes on Babies, Otto Kahn, Anxious Parents, the trials of a commuter, a Nutmeg State episode and The First First Lady. Let it suffice to conclude our comment with a couplet which illustrates still more of the Nash wit and compactness of expression.

REFLECTION ON A COMMON MISAPPREHENSION

So many really nice ladies are overjoyed
To be thought hard-boiled when as a matter of fact they are only Freud.

SOLEMN MOODS

In "Jasbo Brown and Selected Poems" by DuBose Heyward (Farrar & Rinehart) the author of "Porgy" (in poem and play), "Brass Ankles", a play and "The Half Pint Flask" is revealed in moods of serious thought. Most of the poems are of this quality, though they are by no means heavy. "Jasbo Brown" tells of the Negro from whom, according to tradition, jazz has taken its name. "The Woman", "The Girl", "Chant for an Old Town", "Your Gifts", "Elegy" and "Epitaph for a Poet" are the poems in the book which most impressed me. The latter poem will bear quotation here.

EPITAPH FOR A POET

Here lies a spendthrift who believed
That only those who spend may keep;
Who scattered seeds, yet never grieved
Because a stranger came to reap;
A failure who might well have risen;
Yet, ragged, sang exultantly
That all success is but a prison,
And only those who fail are free:
Who took what little Earth had given
And watched it blaze, and watched it die;
Who could not see a distant Heaven
Because of dazzling nearer sky.
Who never flinched till Earth had taken
The most of him back home again,
And the last silences were shaken
With songs too lovely for his pen.

One feels that the poetry of Mr. Heyward is written with a deep earnestness and genuineness. To paraphrase a line from "The Woman"—his is the hand that sinks the furrows deep. His portraits and descriptions are moving and effective in their deliberate and rather grave manner, and he is at all times the true poet.

Several Fish Taken—Mrs. Witham Given Birthday Party.

Although the ice is not out of Upper Kear Lake, several nice salmon have been caught, the largest weighing eight pounds and none smaller than three.

Mrs. S. R. Andrews has been sick the past week and under the doctor's care.

One of the nicest parties of the season was given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Witham, at their home in the village in honor of Mrs. Arthur Witham of Bridgton, it being her birthday. At eight o'clock all were invited to untangle a spider's web made by Kathryn Davis, it being some job to find the end, which was a tally card consisting of a cat, which was very unique. Much merriment was had before all were untangled. There were eight tables of bridge, after which refreshments were served of ice cream and cake and salted peanuts, also two nice birthday cakes, one made by Addie Stone, which was prettily decorated and one presented by the hostess, decorated with candles to represent her age. Mrs. Witham was then presented with lots of nice presents. The prizes were awarded to Miss Eleanor Walker and S. R. Andrews, first, Mary Watson and Hilton McAllister, second. After spending a very jolly evening all left wishing Mrs. Witham many happy returns of the day.

"ABNER ON THE SCHOLAR JOB"

There's been lots of excitement in Woodstock
On the Perkins Valley Road,
Since Abner has taken the scholar job,
With his pesky crazy Ford.
His mind is occupied while sleeping,
With this friend of his so dear,
That he's beginning to get strange notions,
And his neighbors call him queer.

Just as soon as he arouses
Out he goes and cranks a while.
He cranks this way, he cranks that way,
Trying hard to keep his smile;
As his arm grows weaker and weaker
And he's ready to turn up his toes,
When he's cranked his last turn over,
The pesky thing hiccoughs and goes.

Then he jumps round to the throttle
Turns on all the gas there is,
He puts his head up like a rooster,
Almost crows! the honor's his!
After once he gets her started
He keeps her going the rest of the while,
Till it's time to carry the scholars,
The distance being about two miles.

Up the roads he goes like blazes,
To the old Cliff Wilson farm,
Gathers in the Thurlow children,
Then he turns round slow and calm.

Puts the gas to her like water
Down the road he makes a dash,
Hauls her in again at Silver's,
Hollers loud, "Get in, Carl Cush."

Then again he gets her started
Just to stop all in a whirl,
For at the "old turn" stands another,
He yells again, "Get in here, Earl."

Then once more he gets her going,
Gathering speed all the while,
Forgets to haul up for the Polands,
Stops below about one-half mile.

Now the last long stretch is started
Down the grand old Guideboard Hill,
By the church, round the four corners,
Down the hill, then to the mill.

By the casket shop he speeds her,
Taking time there just to nod,
For he knows well should he linger
Soon he'd be beneath the sod.

Up the hill again at Gayden's,
Lizzie rambles swift and cool,
Abner waves his hand to Liza,
Turns in at the Union School.

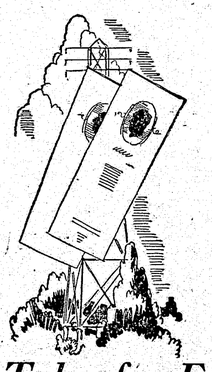
Dividends...
Over 1.7 times earned



WHEN your banker or a bond salesman or a stockholder or an employe advises you to purchase the Preferred Stock $6 Dividend Series of Central Maine Power Company they KNOW the earnings statement back them up in their assertion that it is an exceptionally SAFE investment and that the Company is in an exceptionally STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION.

Take, for Example, the Company's Earnings for the 12 Months Ended February 29, 1932

The Company took in during the 12 months, from the sale of electric energy and gas, over seven million four hundred thousand dollars.

It set up nearly a MILLION DOLLARS either for REPLACING property that was worn out or to put aside as a RESERVE for this purpose.

Its other operating expenses, including TAXES paid to the Federal government, state and municipal, money paid in WAGES, amounted to nearly THREE MILLION DOLLARS.

The Company paid for the use of borrowed money through bonds outstanding and as guaranteed dividends on stock of subsidiary companies, a million and a third dollars.

That left a remainder, after all bills were paid, of NET INCOME, available for dividends on the Company's Preferred Stock of over two million two hundred thousand dollars OVER 1.7 TIMES ITS PREFERRED STOCK DIVIDEND REQUIREMENTS.

For 26 years—during all kinds of business ups and downs—Central Maine Power Company has always EARNED enough to pay its obligations and to have a substantial sum left over as a SURPLUS.

Isn't this past dividend record and your own knowledge of the necessity of electric light and power, all the ASSURANCE you need that you are investing for SAFETY and YIELD when you invest your savings in the Preferred Stock $6 Dividend Series of Central Maine Power Company?

Ancient Knowledge for Pilgrims

Twelve Pilgrims joined the caravan that made a long journey through the mysterious desert, Friday night. This was at a gathering of Mechanic Falls Realm No. 1, Princes of the Grand Orient at Knights of Pythias Hall, Oxford village.

The secret session for the inner chamber opened in due form with the neophytes breathlessly waiting in the outer court for the ordeal anticipated. On the zero hour the long line of trembling knowledge seekers were ushered into the august presence of the High Kahooter and his trusty henchmen for a solemn initiation into the secrets of Orientalism as practiced by this particular cult. Only a Prince can appreciate the meaning of the long, but exciting journey over the hot sands and around perplexing obstacles that litter the trail flanked by ghastly relics of a bygone civilization.

The weary travelers were introduced to objects, both occult and material, sacred to the ancient Egyptians and eventually received the highest token the Grand Orient can bestow.

After the secret work had been given by Fred R. Robinson, pipes were lighted and a variety program followed. Walter Peaco, the whistler, with Bill Locke at the piano provided good music; Dennis Pike of Norway rattled the bones in true minstrel style. Peaco, Pike, Locke and Edwards of Casco set feet tapping with music on two harmonicas, bones and piano.

Remarks were made by B. G. Smith of Gorham, N. H., prominent in the Knights of Pythias and Past Grand Chancellor of New Hampshire. John E. Everett of South Paris, Past Grand Chancellor of Maine, spoke interestingly. Ernest Edwards of Casco sang two songs that raised a sand storm and encores. Dallas Benson told humorous stories. Others who were called on for remarks were Arthur Gammon of Auburn, formerly of Norway. J. L. Wilton, Oxford, Walter S. Chandler of South Paris and Maurice E. Prince, Norway. Fred R. Robinson of Oxford spoke briefly and closed the program.

As a matter of history, the Grand Orient in this section had its birth in the mill office at Oxford forty odd years ago. The late John B. Robinson, Judge Maurice Prince of Mechanic Falls and others conceived the plan and prepared a ritual primarily as a side degree for the Knights of Pythias. The order flourished and escaped from its native town and Pythianism. Today any man of good moral character and recommended by a member may join on the consideration of a small fee. Being solely an order of good fellowship, the initiation fee is devoted to eatables and a supper is served when the journey are of sufficient numbers to provide the where-with-all.

While the ritualistic ceremonies have changed but little since the founders made up their copy, many innovations and spectacular mysteries have from time to time been added. Some are unique, others have been borrowed, thus making a pleasing journey both for the untutored neophyte and the sophisticated brothers lounging around the fringe of the desert.

It was announced that another caravan will start at K. of P. Hall, Oxford, Friday evening, April 22. A full quota of pilgrims is expected and a feed will be served if the number showing up permits. Anyhow there will be a good time for all concerned.

The Woodman Mills in Hiram

Replying to an editorial note in the Advertiser of Mar. 11, following the obituary of Mrs. Margaret Harmon Waldron, formerly of Hiram, her granddaughter, Mrs. John A. Willis, 52 Allston Street, Revere, Mass., has kindly furnished interesting facts.

Mrs. Waldron was born in Buxton, July 17, 1831, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Woodman. Five years later the family settled in East Hiram, where the father operated a saw mill and grist mill for some years. After her marriage, Mrs. Waldron went to Boston, in 1881 they settled in Chelsea, Mass., and in 1896 to Revere, where her husband died in 1901. She had since lived with her granddaughter, Mrs. Willis.

In her letter to the Advertiser, Mrs. Willis tells much about the family history while in Hiram as follows:

"The saw mill is still in use, although some has been added to it. It is situated in East Hiram on what is known as Babcock Brook. The old homestead is a beautiful white house, situated on a knoll near the saw mill and is owned by a Mr. Harvey. Mrs. Waldron, the last few years of her life, talked much about the old homestead and told us much about the brick ovens and lay of the house, and Mr. Harvey very kindly showed us through and it was just a perfect picture as she had given us in her mind. The grist mill, I understand, was torn down many years ago. Her youngest brother, Melville S. Woodman, of Banks, Oregon, is very feeble and unable to write much, but his wife or son might be able to tell you more of the homestead. The two oldest boys married and moved away and the three younger boys went to Civil War, one dying and the other two never returning to Hiram. It was sold to a family named Rankin and is still in their possession, (a married daughter).

A steady rain during Monday and Tuesday raised the brooks to freshet pitch and added misery to the discomforts of country roads. The rural mail carriers, Walter Cullinan on Route 2, through Northwest Norway, and George Young, Route 1, over Crockett Ridge, and through Millettville, start from the office in cars, but exchange for horses before making half their circuits. Lack of deep snow the past winter has allowed the frost to work deep, we are told.

Thus, as the National Exhibits of General Motors Products open, effective April 2nd, Pontiac Six, Chief of 1932 Values, further establishes its value leadership.

These reductions—up to $50 per car—represent exceedingly important savings to motorists who desire the refinements and riding comfort usually found in larger cars, but who wish to purchase these qualities at a low price.

These prices are the very lowest ever quoted for Pontiac cars and are for the finest and largest six-cylinder cars Pontiac has ever built. The resulting values are, we believe, the very greatest ever offered the American public during the whole of the motor car's history. They mean a new basis of motor car values, a new incentive to the American people to buy motor cars now.

Children's Column

Dear Corner Cousins: When I was about ten years old, brother and I had the cows to drive up from the pasture, the cow lane was the main road and the pasture bars were half way up a hill.

Part of the time father used to turn the oxen out with the cows and they used to bother us about coming up, brother and I talked it over and I was to stand at the bars and when the last ox came through I was to grab him by the tail and race him to the house.

That looked like fun to us as we planned it up, but a little later I failed to see where the fun came for me. Just the same I did as we planned and when Mr. Ox came along I jumped for his tail and he jumped to run and of course, when he started to run up flew his tail and I grabbed it and away we went down the hill, across a long, high bridge. When we were crossing the bridge, my legs looked like the chicken's did when the hawk was after him and he was running for the coop.

I was just hitting once in twelve to fifteen feet and when I did hit I would bounce into the air and sometimes I thought I was never going to hit again, but I didn't dare to let go, for fear my nose would be scraped off my face when I landed, which I surely would have done, if I hadn't had something to help me along, but as soon as we commenced to take the rise in the hill up to the barn, the ox slacked up a little and when I could keep my equilibrium I let go of his tail. Father was waiting for me when I got to the barn, as he took me by the hand and led me into the barn, he said, "I thought I had told you not to run the cows from the pasture to the barn". He laid me gently over his knee, but he didn't act very gentle after that, so ended that day. Here is hoping everybody will be o. k. this week and we shall hear from you all. As ever, —Grandma.

Dear Corner Cousins. It may not be long, I will be with now, as I heard one of the Silver Tops say they were about ready to unearth Miss Curiosity, and when that is done I shall vanish, but I am in hopes to hear from Aunt Betsy before it happens and perhaps she has written to me at my last address, but it has been such awful traveling for the past few we ks I have not visited the town where the letter is supposed to be, but nevertheless, I am going to tell you about a little fishing trip I took once upon a time. There is the Whitney and Hogan Ponds, below Oxford and they can be reached from Welchville by boat.

The Caldwell's have a cottage on the shore of one of these ponds and years ago Wm. Caldwell and some others went down there fishing for white perch. We went up the river in two boats, almost to the pond, then took the boats over land a little ways, then into the pond. Oh! what lovely fishing. We had a glorious day and as I was hooking my last fish I was standing up in the boat and stepped back to land it in the boat, when the boat gave a lurch I lost my balance and took a backward dive into the pond. I went down and closed the door. What a time they had landing me into the boat when I came up.

I hope this won't give me away, but perhaps Mrs. Alice King Wilson may remember the day and party, as some of them were to her house that day. Her mother was living then. No one at home last week. I do miss you young folks very much, now come and lets hear from some of you soon. Will someone give me a nice salad recipe? Yours truly,

—Miss Curiosity.

Dear Corner Cousins: I am glad to see you are on the gain and back on the job once more. I am wondering if Aunt Betsy got my letter I sent to her through the Advertiser, and if she did, if she sent me a membership card, to the address I sent her. Of course, it is not my true address. I am having it come in a round about way so I can keep in the shade until I can give my surprise party.

There are some that think they have found me out, but I am in doubt about it. Anyway, I am just going to keep on the Q. T. about it and send you all a good old temperance lecture for your health.

Yours truly, Miss Curiosity.

Temperance Address

Ye friends of moderation,
Who think a reformation,
Or moral renovation,
Would benefit our nation;
Who deem intoxication,
With all its dissipation,
In every rank and station,
The cause of degradation;
Of which your observation
Gives daily demonstration,
Who see the ruination,
Distress and desolation,
The open violation
Of moral obligation,
The wretched habitation
Without accommodation
Or any regulation,
For common sustentation,
A scene of desperation,
Unequalled in creation,
The frequent desecration
Of Sabbath's ordination;
The crime and depredation,
Defying legislation;
The awful profanation
Of common conversation,
The mental aberration,
A dire infatuation,
With every sad gradation,
To maniac desperation;
Ye who wish consternation,
Behold its devastation,
And utter condemnation
On all inebriation;
Why sanction its deviation
Or show disapprobation
Of any combination
For its extermination?
Without prevarication,
We deem a declaration,
That offers no temptation,
By any palliation
Of this abomination.
The only sure foundation
To the total extirpation;
And under this persuasion,
Hold no communication,
With noxious emanation
Of brewer's fermentation,
Of spirit distillation,
Producing stimulation;
To this determination
We call consideration,
Invite co-operation;
Not doubting invitation,
And high approbation,
Without provocation,
Will rise your estimation,
And by continuation,
With this association,
You may, by meditation,
Ensure the preservation
Of a future generation
From all contamination,
And may each indication
Of such regeneration
Be the theme of exaltation
Till its final consummation.

NEW VARIETY OF POTATO

United States Department of Agriculture Says the "Katahdin" Will Resist Mosaic Disease

The "Katahdin", a new variety of potato resistant to the highly troublesome mosaic disease, has been tested by the United States Department of Agriculture in all sections of the country and found to be well adapted to the climatic conditions in almost all the states.

It was bred by Department of Agriculture scientists specifically to fight mosiac disease and is highly successful in this, though it is still somewhat susceptible to the related diseases, leaf roll and spindle tuber. No seed tubers are available for commercial distribution, however, for it is felt that further tests are still desirable.—Washington Correspondence of Boston Transcript.

The Function of Government

By Earle B. Renwick of Portland and Bolster's Mills

The government of the United States under its present constitution is the oldest existing government in the world today. Every country has undergone a change either gradually or suddenly by revolution since 1776, with the exception of our own country. Theodore Roosevelt predicted twenty years ago that this government would last fifty years longer. There are but thirty years left for his prophecy to come true and today conditions are rapidly speeding in the direction of the reality of Roosevelt's statement.

Why, may one ask, and what are the reasons for this decadence? Who is to blame and what is the remedy? In one sentence these questions may be solved. We need to get back to the original intent of our government as founded by our forefathers. Our original constitution was an ideal document setting forth the functions of government as are best suited to the needs of the people. Since that time and more in recent years laws have been enacted for the benefit of the few instead of the many. Witness the tax laws. Even good legislation like the Sherman Anti-Trust law has been shifted to the discard, while people and corporations violate this law every day in much the same way that they violate the 18th amendment.

In former years people thrilled at the words of "Give me liberty or give me death". People acclaimed "with malice toward none, with liberty and justice for all". Are these things pertinent today? Have the common masses of people any real liberty? No, I say they haven't even liberty of thought, for the very newspapers of the Associated Press, etc., which they read, control their opinions. Liberty and justice for all—is there reason or even sense in such words when our very courts are swayed by crafty attorneys, whose very aim seems to be to thwart the law and drag justice in the mud.

The monied man and the racketeer control our politics and our government and the mob votes according to their dictates. We laugh at the foolishness of the ancient peoples of Rome in allowing themselves to be domineered by politicians. But today here in America, we find a parallel situation only multiplied many times over.

It is all very well for me to criticize and state these facts which every real thinking person recognizes as truth. But we seek a remedy. Everybody is crying for the way out of depression and our present economic dilemma. And blindly we go on making new laws worse than the old ones and cluttering up our statute books with an ever increasing volume of rubbish that only serves as a rummage pile for crafty attorneys to pick out bargains for their clients. If we continue for the next fifty years making legislation in an ever increasing volume as has been our tendency in the past, what can be the inevitable result? Nothing but utter chaos. Will any human brain be able to equip itself through study to be a competent and fair administrator of the law? No.

Today we are on the brink of disaster and Theodore Roosevelt's prediction is about to come true. Americans—True Americans, patriots in the vein, must awake and save the country while yet there is time. Every honest man who is sincere in his thoughts for his country's welfare and progress, must do his part to bring this land of ours back to the condition that it was envisioned by Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Henry Clay, Lincoln and Roosevelt. But how?

Only through a proper understanding and enforcement of the real functions of government can America long endure.

Government exists by the consent of the governed. Government should only be for the benefit of all the people. No law should exist which does not benefit all of society. No law should be passed which grants special privilege. Government should not legislate against an individual's liberty when that liberty does not infringe upon the rights of other members of society. Government should only regulate the associations of people, one to the other, and severally. And in this regulation the rights of each individual should be protected that he should have the freedom to not only worship as he sees fit, but have the freedom to earn a respectable livelihood and the freedom of his own moral destiny. After all when morality is confined entirely to an individual is it not synonomous with religious freedom; that is to say, pragmatic religion and not theory?

Let's have laws that guarantee to each member of society the right to work for a livelihood, free from the exploitation of the few. Let's have laws that allow each and every man to earn a competence and not laws that make it possible for some men to become so rich that it is impossible for them to spend their incomes while other millions are hungry. We need such laws to regulate the relationship of each individual in society, so that the masses of the people will not be exploited for the benefit of the few.

Is it right that a farmer should be forced to sell his potatoes for 10 to 15 cents less per bushel than it cost him to raise them? Mussolini in Italy has solved this problem by a minimum fixing of prices for wholesale and retail produce. This may or may not prove beneficial in the long run, but at present it works for it kills the racketeer or exploiter at the start.

In the future let's put no law upon the statute books that does not deal with human relations, one to the other. We should not legislate morality, but leave that to the churches, as their business. The Jewish people tried to legislate morality and failed. Christ built a temple in every man's heart and made every man the captain of his own soul. Government has the right to punish the individual or group who infringe upon the rights or seek to exploit others by crafty or immoral practices. But that is where government's function ends. The rest is the duty of each individual as he sees it in his own heart. The churches can guide him and educate him by moral suasion, but there can be no compulsion of religious thought, belief or destiny.

So in summary, let Government guarantee to every man, woman and child the liberty to work, untrammeled, unexploited, and free; granting special privileges to none and protecting for every man his God-given rights to the pursuit of material and spiritual progress that happiness and real justice may abound. Liberty? Yes, and infinite liberty, where man does not trample upon the rights of others. But laws most severe and strong to punish the exploiter of his fellowmen.

What's Maine to Do with Insullism?

From the Lewiston Journal

A name that seems to be anathema, in certain groups of Maine folks, is otherwise regarded in the old home town of Chicago. We have no explanation of comment to make as to the underlying purpose behind the Maine impulse; but when a man's own town-folk like him it is possible that the man is not altogether an ogre.

The name is "Insull". When certain people in Maine wish to conjure up the "devil and Tom Walker" they say "Insull." When they want to picture to you a sort of creeping, slinking nestilence, they say "Insull." When they want to arouse the echoes of applause, they refer to "Insullism."

We suppose that there never was a worse man than Old Sam Insull. To be sure, he was Edison's right hand man, for many years, but probably that means nothing. Mr. Edison summered and wintered him and treasured his friendship and affection. He came over here from England, after a liberal education in schools of the most varied and culturalsort, to be Mr. Edison's private secretary and for many years managed Mr. Edison's businesss. He had full charge of all of them, for years while Mr. Edison invented. He organized and managed for Mr. Edison, the Edison Electric Tube Co., the Edison Machine Works and the Edison Lamp Co. He built and ran the Edison Machine Works for Mr. Edison at Schenectady, N. Y., and when everything was consolidated he managed the sales and the manufacturing of the entire business, known as the Edison General Electric. When he finally resigned and organized the Chicago Electric, he was one of the leading officials of the General Electric, made by consolidating the Edison with the Thomson-Houston. And since then his progress has of course steadily gone downward until he has become president of most of the mid-western electrical companies; running all of the Chicago electricity and power; chairman of this and that, such as transportation companies Chicago Civic Opera, Chairman of Chicago Council of Defense, head of railroads, leader in several enormous campaigns for the advancement of Chicago. In short, a regular wolf for business. And he's 72 years old at that.

We have no defense to offer for any man who would do all of those nasty things. He must have made a lot of money; issued a lot of stock and manipulated a lot of deals; and altogether been quite too busy. No man should be as active as that. Man's first business is naturally to sit in an arm-chair and curse people who form Edison companies, consolidate into such wicked organizations as the General Electric; build such rapacious organizations as the Middle Western Utilities and especially contribute $50,000 to election of a U. S. Senator, who was on a P. U. Commission—Sam's biggest mistake. To have united all of the small dying, poverty-stricken electric light companies into one system and call it a "Utility"—what a crime.

But it is odd, that in spite of this, Chicago seems to like Insull.

Wednesday evening, January 20, you may have heard, over the radio, the account of a remarkable meeting, in Chicago. The Chambers of Commerce, of which there is a branch called the Junior Chamber, including no man or woman over 35 years of age, met to award a great honor. It was the annual award to the citizen of Chicago, not over 35 years old who was the outstanding example of the person who had done the most remarkable service for his fellowmen during 1931.

The speaker who made the award was preceded by the heads of labor organizations, by the President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and each of them said that when the committee came to consider the matter of the award, but one name was mentioned—Samuel Insull, Jr. Said the labor-man, "this should be a comfort not only to him, but to his distinguished father, who has also done for Chicago and its people in every good way what few other men have ever done for a community in any record of history. Young Insull led the entire forces of Chicago in the relief of unemployment; in administration of every service for assistance; in all sorts of efforts to welfare. The young man responded in a modest way, disclaiming the credit for the vastly successful campaign that raised over ten millions for relief, and sat down amid such an overwhelming acclaim, as one rarely hears.

Of course Maine is right about it. We have no defense to make for all the things the so-called "Insulls" have done to Maine through their representative, Mr. Wyman. They have about ruined us—of course. They have disturbed the flow of our rivers by building dams across them after some millions of years of idleflowage. They have disturbed the quiet of peaceful towns like Bucksport and built a paper mill, and probably built it out of money sweat from the people of the land by means of three to five dollar a month bills for lighting homes, supplying power for refrigerators, etc. They have gone ruthlessly into such cities as Bath, Augusta, Lewiston, Auburn, Saco, and without any sort of evidence of feeling have entered the very bed-rooms of industries that were peacefully dying and administered oxygen to them; made them sit up and go to work. They took the Bath Iron Works, and compelled it to get out of its death-bed and resume. They revived the Edwards Mill at Augusta, when Maine was looking sadly at its demise and preparing to ride in the procession as mourners and they got it back into a sort of running order. And made money! We hope so. Nobody else seemed willing to try. They came over to Lewiston and took the Androscoggin Mill when it was about to liquidate; freeze up; board up; and grow moss on its towers and walls and spent a quarter of a million or more to reorganize it, in the courage of belief in ultimate revival of textiles which has not yet arrived.

They took the Hill Mfg. Co. and bought control of the Bates Mfg. Co., when it also was on the verge of liquidation. They have kept some 5,000 to 8,000 people at work, as well as it has been possible to keep anyone at work in these times, and they are building new business daily, in red-ink, we assume, but hoping for black. A single word from them or from Mr. Wyman could shut every mill in Lewiston. Sometimes we wonder that he does not say it, and be done with it. He gets very little except subtle abuse, from some quarters. They took over the Saco (York) mills. They have spent about twenty millions or so around here, with two great dams and all of these ventures. They did ask once upon a time to be permitted to sell surplus power under the strictest rulings and laws of the Fernald Act, but we said "no" and they said nothing, thereafter only kept on building. We think they were lucky when the people forbade them to set up transmission-lines for export of surplus power under the direction of Maine as a State, under its Fernald law, under absolute control of the P. U. Commission. Their Maine ventures in electricity stand well; pay their dividends and will continue to pay them probably, unless disturbed by hostiles. Their industrial ventures are decidedly otherwise, as ventures but have had one merit. They have sustained employment; have paid wages; have brought vast sums of money into Maine business. Have kept the fires burning in many a modest home. We don't know what might be the state of affairs in Lewiston, without the adventurous spirit, the courage and the fight, shown by Mr. Wyman.

All this is purely gratuitous, on our part. We have not seen W. S. Wyman face to face for four years, that we can recall; have never communicated with him; never had a letter from him in our lifetime; have had no communication with any of his agents or assistants in respect to the company or its business, save the other day when we telephoned over to get the figures on rural-electrification and received the same.

We do not know what sins of finance have been committed, Insullism. We are told that they are awful. We are aware that plans are being formulated for an investigation of rates in general of all Electrical companies in Maine, by State appropriation to a large amount. This is agreeable to us. We understand, from what we heard last winter at a hearing, at Augusta, that this will be agreeable to the Companies, only they want it thorough. We join in a disapproval of all monopolistic gouging. We stand by the people in resentment of special interest overcharging due to to over-valuations, or profits based on watered-stocks and excessive book-values. We do, however, deprecate the sentence before conviction and the use any going business as stalking-horse for personal ends or individual prominence in politics, in this distressing period. We face business as it is. Its reforms are essentially fundamental, not personal. The Chicago incident may illustrate nothing. It may mean considerable. Maine knows her own onions. It may well consider its affairs as they are.

Fernald Law is reestablished, is dead as an issue. The fate of many industries which was certain less than two years ago is now in hands of others, than they then were. Patience, courage, confidence and hope remain to be evinced. In all political adventure of the summer at hand, we may do well to consider all phases of a matter of no small importance, the maintenance of Maine business on an even keel, hoping that the time may come when excessive profits shall cause us to demand rights, far greater than the book-balances now suggest Maine's big job is to curb expenditures; lessen taxation; cut down outlay; relieve unemployment; abolish a lot of sentimental and coddling bunkum in so-called philanthropy; encourage legitimate business, wait wisely for general expansion before entering on advanced ground in development of fancy theories, and play the game safe and sound on its present sound and substantial credit and general business.

NORWAY VICINITY

A Brave Editor

From The Nation, March 31

We have reserved a special place on our Honor Roll for 1932 for Walter L. Sanborn of the North Penn Reporter of Lansdale, Pennsylvania, about twenty-five miles from Philadelphia, for a most notable piece of patriotic service in bringing about the conviction of an assistant district attorney, a county detective, and a township police chief for administering the third degree to a man arrested on suspicion of committing a crime. Yes, this editor was actually stirred and roused to action despite the fact that the victim was a negro, a person of no influence, who could not control an advertisement and perhaps not even a subscriber. Mr. Sanborn was, moreover, not to be deterred by threats against himself, by political pressure, or by the charge of the District Attorney that the editor's actions were due solely to politics and a conspiracy to throw mud at the District Attorney during the heat of a campaign. In the phraseology of the street, "he bucked the gang, kept his nerve, and got away with it."

On May 9, 1931, an attempt to blow up a Negro's home in Fort Washington. On the purest suspicion William G. Campbell was arrested and charged with the crime. A few days later he was taken to the barracks of the Pennsylvania State Police in Jeffersonville for "questioning", being accompanied by Ralph L. Rinalducci, an assistant district attorney; Joseph Trunk, one of the District Attorney's detectives; and Brooks Cassidy, chief of police of Upper Dublin township. Campbell's "questioning" took the form of beating him on the shins and then across the kidneys with a blackjack, and of hanging him to the rafters by the overalls. When the victim lost consciousness he was cut down, further abused, and finally returned to the borrough lockup in Morristown, because the officers did not wish to return him to the jail in his battered condition. After several days in misery there he was released, his case then being reported to a judge by his physician. The judge took the matter up with the District Attorney himself, one Frank X. Renninger, who made the usual whitewashing investigation and reported that there was nothing whatever to Campbell's story.

On June 11 the news reached Mr. Sanborn. He saw his duty at once and on June 12 the story appeared. The report of the case Mr. Sanborn followed up with an editorial demanding the prosecution of the officials involved. In this position he was joined by E. S. Moser, the veteran editor of the Collegeville Independent, who "denounced the perpetrators of the outrage on Campbell in vigorous terms". At once the endangered officers further abused their official authority in the hope of terrifying their critics into silence. William Campbell was rearrested on July 8, although there was no new evidence of any kind whatsoever. He was again held in jail nearly three weeks, being finally released on $2,500 bail on July 28. Three days later the authorities moved on warrants sworn out by Campbell. Messrs. Rinalducci, Trunk and Cassidy were held in the same bail in the same court as their victim. Forunately the Attorney General appointed a special deputy attorney general to try the case for the commonwealth and gave him as his assistant, Dennis A. O'Neil, the attorney for the negro. The officials were indicted on September 8, and tried four days later before a jury which the judge, J. Ambler Williams, ordered the court officers to keep in the custody of the court day and night until the case was finished, a procedure only used in capital cases. The trial lasted ten days, until a verdict of guilty was brought in on September 30. There were the usual delays and efforts to obtain a new trial, so that it was not until March 4 last that sentences were imposed. Rinalducci, if the highest court of the State should not reverse the verdict, will serve not less than eighteen months, nor more than three years in the penitentiary, Joseph Trunk will spend not less than one year nor more than three in the same prison, and the guilty chief of police, Brooks Cassidy, will spend six months in the Montgomery County prison.

This is really an extraordinary achievement when one recalls the baleful influence of the political machine in Pennsylvania. We wish that this case might be broadcast over every radio in the United States. Every newspaper in the country ought to publish it—as has been most admirably done by Editor and Publisher—in order that the profession might get the fullest possible benefit from Walter L. Sanborn's courage, professional honor, and true Americanism. Throughout Mr. Sanborn made it clear that prosecution was not a persecution and that it had nothing personal in it, but was merely a public protest against the third degree and an honest effort to purge the community in which he lives of the shame of this official crime. We wish that there might be painted over the doors of every police station in America these words of Mr. Sanborn's: "The idea of clubbing and choking accused persons into confessions is nauseating, repugnant to our judicial system and to the American spirit of fair play."

Note—The editor referred to above is a Norway boy, son of the late D. S. and Adelaide (Wilson) Sanborn. He graduated from the Norway high school in the class of 1897 and from Bowdoin College four years later. He read law for a while with the late Judge Wm. F. Jones and started his newspaper work on the Boston Globe. He has been in Lansdale, Pa., some years and owns a controlling interest in the Equitable Publishing Co. of that town.

THE DANGER-SPACE OF THE .22 RIFLE

The .22 rifles will soon be out for practice, and whoever uses one should understand something about its capabilities and its liabilities.

There are three cartridges commonly used in this rifle; the .22 short, the .22 long, and the .22 long rifle. The .22 long rifle is the most powerful of the three, and the short, the least, and consequently the safest to use.

The standard .22 Long Rifle cartridge has a bullet weighing 40 grains, and the ballistic tables give it an initial energy of 100 foot-pounds, which means that it starts with power sufficient to raise 100 pounds one foot. When this is fired at a high angle, it goes up hundreds of feet, and when it comes down with rapidly increasing speed, it acquires great force.

Two boys shooting with these cartridges, at a bird on a telephone wire, killed a woman who was working in her yard, 660 yards from them. Since then, Winchester and the U. S. Co. have printed on their .22 Long Rifle cartons this warning, "Dangerous within one mile" which is 1,760 yards, incidentally. Two United States experts, Captains Crossman and Wotkyns, while experimenting with boat-tail bullets, erosion, machine-guns, automatic rifles, etc., at Miami and Daytona, Florida, shot .22 Long Rifle bullets from machine-rest on the white sand at Daytona, to see how far they would go. They found that the ordinary .22 Long Rifle bullet of 1919 make, with 1,050 foot-seconds speed, would go 1,400 yards, on a calm day, and go farther on a day with wind behind the bullet.

The 4.5 automatic bullet went about the same distance from the service auto or revolver. The angle at which the .22 Long Rifle bullet goes its greatest distance is from 25 to 30 degrees—not 45 degrees, as some folks believe.

The .22 Short (30 grain bullet) will go about 1,000 yards. There are higher-speeded .22 Long Rifle cartridges than the 1919 ones; some will shoot more than a mile. One man got the surprise of his life when his bullet struck a small stone, ricochetted at a right angle, and went through a window 300 yards away. It lodged in a pillow beneath the head of a woman nursing her baby.

These cartridges all belong to the miniature class of .22's, the .22 High-power is a different thing. —Herbert I. Holt.

YOUTH'S PLAN OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Just fifty years ago tonight,
Five boys whose earthly wealth
Was summed up in these simple words,
Ambition, youth and health.
Were gathered in the kitchen,
The evening hours to spend,
And dream of all the future,
And talk as friend to friend.
There was Fred, Howard, Mont and Arthur,
And one they called R. L.,
And life seemed bright with hope and light,
And the tales that time could tell.
And they said as we travel this road of life.
When fifty years have sped,
We will write and tell each other,
Where the paths of life have led.
And strange to say, though fifty years
To this very night has sped,
We all live on, though the youthful dreams
In the thinnest air have fled.
When last I visited that spot,
I smiled as best I could,
The forest trees were growing
Where that good homestead stood.
We've traveled many a weary mile,
When the light seemed mighty dim,
Through the hopes and fears of fifty years,
We've looked for a chance to win.
When we stoop to drink, the waters flee,
Though all around they're plenty.
The joy of life has slipped away,
We found the goblet empty.
But in the sum of all that is,
And all we yet shall see,
Within this broad old universe,
Some recompense there'll be.
We surely can do better,
In the fifty years to come,
For we'll have all that experience,
Of the fifty years we've run.
There's a mighty job before us.
It's a job that must be done,
So watch your step and keep your pep,
Till the battle of life is won.

Fifty years ago Fred and Lamont Cole were visiting us at our home at Middle Intervale, Bethel, where we had just moved, and we made this arrangement. Today Fred is the big jeweler in St. Petersburg, Fla. Arthur lives in Washington, D. C., and the other three of us scattered about in the State of Maine.

Three years later I worked in a logging crew on Sunday River and I am the only man left alive of a crew of tough, rugged men. —R. L. Cummings.

MITCHELLIZED FLASH NOTES

The morning papers announce that Mr. Hoover is no longer "worth" a million, that he gave away $10,000.

This morning I met a Democrat. He said, "I see that Mellon is accused, unfortunately, of being financially interested in some 300 big concerns; that he has refunded taxes to some of these concerns; that he is striving to add to his millions. What of it? Is that not what you and I would do if we had the chance?"

That's it—the desire to be smart, to possess, to get regardless of the cost to other people. To look at the matter from a distance without personal interest and for the sole purpose of discovering the facts, it would appear that there must be a pecuniary interest involved when Big Business "contributes" five million dollars to elect a President. Following this thought to its legitimate(?) conclusion it becomes evident that the elected man automatically becomes the servant of the "interests" instead of the common people.

History, if true as written, reveals that once upon a time we did have patriotic statesmen and office-holders, whose ambition was to improve the condition of the mass, whose personal gain was not the chief consideration. I am confident that there are men of this type now, and I confidently hope that some bright day such will be elected to the Presidency, and be appointed to the office of Treasurer of the U. S.

But what's the use? I am filled with wonder at myself—that I should think so much about it.

Have you read the book, "The Harvest of the Years" by Luther Burbank and Wilbur Hall? I liked Burbank. He was a fine man. He, Edison and Burroughs—three great souls. Still, Burbank did not please everybody. His inability to believe anything that did not seem based on fact, on common sense, angered fanatics. —Mitchell.

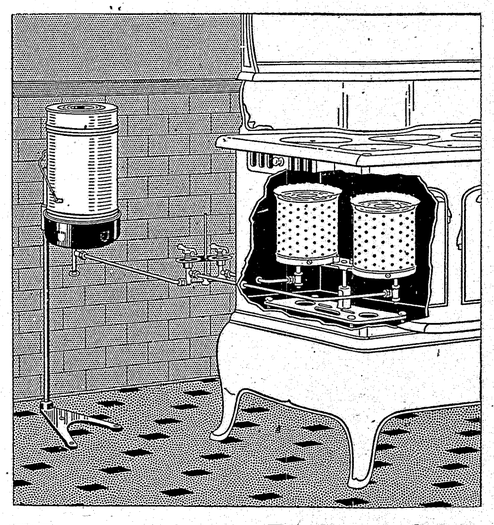
Florence Oil Burner

For Kitchen Ranges



New Low Price $32

And, of course, you burn a Florence only when you are actually cooking or heating. No change in equipment is required. The new Florence is a complete unit and is quickly and easily installed in the fire-box of your present kitchen range.

The new Florence is economical, too. It burns furnace oil (not heavier than 38 degree baume) one of the cheapest household fuels; and uses it most sparingly. The control is entirely in your hands.

Just a simple turn of a lever gives you full, medium or low heat, as you wish. You can run both burners together or separately.

The Oil Burner has enjoyed a spectacular rise to popular favor. The convenience and cleanliness of this new method of cooking and heating has put an end to the day of the drudge.

No more need any woman spend tedious hours wrestling with an old-fashioned stove, shoveling coal like a stoker and contending with mussy ashes. The oil burner does away with all such drudgery; saves hours of valuable time; and gives the comfort of a spick and span kitchen.

Star Dust

By Mrs. Letitia M. Kent

Far back in the long past ages, when all the heavenly bodies formed one immense mass, when the suns, planets, moons, meteors, and all the other different bodies sang together in a vast chorus, a wonderful and crazy revolution took place, scattering and whirling of big and little parts, which in time were to exist as separate bodies as we know them today. This was called centrifugal force that caused the parts to fly off.

Let us imagine in that distant age a dark night, except for that great glittering body. The immensity of space and the size of the shining mass, larger than we can comprehend and far beyond our conception! And then the wonderful sight of the parts as they were thrown off.

How wonderful are the planets.

Everyone should be familiar with them and be able to name them as they become visible during the year.

Jupiter, the large white planet, at present in the eastern sky at night, will remain there during the spring, and be morning star in the autumn. Jupiter has an atmosphere of clouds forming belts, which prevent their being seen beyond their surface. It has nine moons.

Venus is the most conspicuous object in the west in early evening. Heavy clouds prevent seeing beyond the most obvious features, one being the phases similar to those of the moon. During March the phase is gibbons. By the middle of April it will be quarter and then crescent until it disappears from the east. May 22 it will be the brightest, about twice as bright as now and will be visible in full daylight. It is fully six times brighter than the Dog star, Serius, which is seen in the south. It is five times brighter than Jupiter. Venus, a little smaller than the earth, resembles it in many ways.

Mercury has the distinction of having one of its years equal to about eighty of our days. It can be seen in the west just after sunset about March 22, July 20, and Nov. 11. This planet is difficult to see as it never sets far from the sun, and many people have never seen it. It should be seen near the end of March, as evening star. It will appear as a bright star low in the west as twilight fades.

Mars, distinguished by its red color, will not be easily seen until December, when it appears in the east at midnight. At that time its nearness to the earth will afford excellent opportunity for detailed study of its snow capped poles and dark markings.

Saturn, one of the most beautiful of celestial objects, is remarkable for its series of rings surrounding it, supposed to be made up of swarms of meteors, each pursuing its own orbit.

Neptune and Uranus are our most distant planets.

Meteors have their first known shower of the year about April 20. The Lyrids are best seen after midnight, as in the case of most meteoric showers. They should be whitish and swift, having long paths. The perseids appear in August. In November the Leonides, maximum about the 17th, should be remarkable this year, judging from previous years and showers.

A total eclipse of the sun over central New England will be visible Aug. 31, 1932. The eclipse of 1925 drew vast crowds, but this year's eclipse promises much more. It will be the last one in this locality for many years, something like a century. It is supposed to begin 19 minutes and 33 seconds past 2 p. m., Aug. 31, and end at 33 minutes and 27 seconds past 4 o'clock. Longest duration of totality will be 99 seconds.

Belief that a new stellar system, millions of light years away from the earth, may be discovered with the new 200 in. telescope to be erected at Mt. Wilson, has been advanced recently by Dr. Wm. de Sitter, astronomer at the University of Leydon, Holland. He says recent findings lead to a conception of the universe free from the finite limits heretofore imposed upon it by astronomers. The universe may be greater than we ever imagined. It may be infinite.

Boston may soon have a Planitarium. Already Chicago has one. The call for one comes from all the leading professors of astronomy, including Dr. Harlow Shapley, head of the Harvard Observatory, Prof. Leon Campbell, noted Harvard astronomer and scientists connected with other astronomical stations in and around Greater Boston. Already steps have been taken to this end and it has been urged upon Mayor Curley of Boston. It is said it would become self-sustaining and also an earning exposition, once it was in going order. There would be a dome representing the sky. Around the dark blue background would revolve the different heavenly bodies. Persons who have seen one declare it is even more wonderful than the sky itself in its effect upon the human mind and imagination. A great interest would soon be aroused. The total cost would be something like $250,000.

Let us believe that all the planets are inhabited because why should the little earth be the only one to have people? Of course conditions are different, but the living beings would conform to the difference. They need not be in the least like us, but there must be people of some kind on all the planets, and in the other universes, if there are other systems. How strange that there can be living things in the water, but no more strange that a different kind of people, fitting other planetary conditions should exist on all the planets.

They may be superior to us or inferior. What more wonderful thought that that these heavenly bodies will be going on and on and on through endless time! It is beyond the power of thought! As a poet has said:

"A year—a life—
What are they?
The telling of a tale—
The passing of a meteor—
A dim speck seen for a moment
On Time's horizon,
Dropping into Eternity."

A rough survey of the farm woods might be worth while at this time of year. Take stock and determine what you have now, and what you should have. By far the greater number of farm woodlots are in need of improvement. Are poorer trees with no local market in the majority and crowding out the better ones? Are some of the trees overmature—going back from rots and decay faster than they are growing? Do some of the trees show evidence of attack by insects or disease? Are there open places that ought to be planted up? Is there idle land, now contributing nothing, that ought to be growing trees? Are there thickets where growth is slow because the trees are overcrowded? If you get a general idea of the condition of your woods now, you can plan some woods work to good advantage.

The Lindy Class won their second game of basket ball from the Norway Juniors at South Paris high school gym Saturday forenoon and piled up a strong margin represented by 39-21.

Beryl Mine Again Under Fire

Breach of Contract Claimed

The famous beryl mine in Albany, controlled by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bumpus of Auburn, has again gained front page display. Not on the discovery of another cluster of giant chrystals, but because of a $10,000 suit in which Stanley I. Perham of West Paris and Harold C. Perham of Minot charge breach of contract. The hearing is before Justice Chapman in the county buildings at Auburn.

The Perham brothers claim that they contracted as selling agents with Mr. and Mrs. Bumpus for 120 tons of beryllium at $50 a ton, but only ninety tons were furnished. In addition to violating the delivery contract, they allege that Bumpus refused to permit Harold C. Perham to quarry out the remainder called for in the contract.

In a letter from Bumpus to Perham read in evidence, the writer stated he and his associates had decided to cease business relations because Perham had done acts of bad faith as a selling agent, and had worked for the interest of other parties, the letter is reported to have stated.

This charge was denied by the Perhams and evidence was produced to substantiate their testimony.

It is expected the hearing will close on Saturday. Alton C. Wheeler of Auburn is attorney for the Perhams and Geo. C. Wing of Auburn for Mr. and Mrs. Bumpus.
